Golf Digest Unveils Top 10 Favorite Fall Foliage Golf Courses to Play in the United States

Michigan's Most Spectacular Resort - Treetops Resort is Found in a Prestigious List with the Acclaimed 'Masterpiece' Designed by Robert Trent Jones, Sr.

(Gaylord, Michigan) – Golf Digest one of the nation's most respected golf publications recently unveiled its Top 10 Favorite Fall Foliage Golf Course to Play in the United States. Topping the fall foliage list with the story's lead photograph is Treetops Resort's Masterpiece.

In 1985, Robert Trent Jones, Sr. stood at the future site of the first Treetops golf course and decided to build his Masterpiece here. The land overlooks the Pigeon River Valley, featuring heavy forests and rolling hills. When Masterpiece opened in 1987, Golf Digest named it the #2 new resort course in the United States.

Widely recognized as the most scenic course at Treetops, Masterpiece continues to live up to its name today. People can't resist photographing the scenic hills, dramatic drops, and lush greens, not to mention the five water features. This course's selfie backdrops cannot be beat.

With a slope rating of 147, Masterpiece is also considered our most challenging course. Continual elevation changes make club selection difficult. Use the detailed information on the scorecard to acclimate faster to the terrain variations. Hole five is an especially difficult par 5 and is recognized as one of the most challenging holes in Michigan.

Considered by many to be the best Treetops golf course, the Jones Masterpiece is the only golf course located on the main resort property adjacent to the resort's Golf Academy, premier lodging, and dining.

From Golf Digest: Fall is here, meaning a 120-count Crayola box of colors line America's fairways. But not every leaf-peeper links was created equal, so we compiled 10 of our favorite fall foliage courses from across the country, both for your viewing pleasure and to help you plan your next fall golf trip
